CONDITIONAL OPPOSITION TO MOTION TO CONTINUE SENTENCING

The United States conditionally opposes defendant's motion to continue sentencing. Defendant's motion does not articulate specific reasons to continue sentencing or propose a new date for sentencing. Without this information it is not clear whether the issues with the current date will be resolved at the time of a potential new sentencing date. The United States is opposed unless these issues can be clarified.

The United States does not anticipate any victims or other members of the public will participate in sentencing. As a result, no one other than the parties have made plans specific to this sentencing date. However, this case involves a young victim, and their family has expressed a desire for it to be resolved and closed. They are apprised of the progress of the case, and each new date or continuance is difficult on them.
